- The D.C. Family-to-Family Health Information Center

Overview

This resource guide is intended to provide parents and guardians with information regarding community and government resources within the District of Columbia. It is not intended to be a comprehensive list of information and services in the District of Columbia. A listing in this guide should not be interpreted as AJE's endorsement of a particular agency or organization.

Identifying resources, supports and services can be challenging for many families. With frequent changes to the funding of programs and key personnel at community service agencies, families are often left without adequate knowledge of where to access services in times of crisis. This guide will offer information regarding service access points in the following areas: education, advocacy, general assistance, medical services, homelessness, public benefits, early intervention and much more.
